

Martin Yelle

Martin Yelle has been involved with faith education among youth in schools, church and community groups for 25 years. He studied theology at Université Laval and educational sciences at the Université du Québec à Trois-Rivières. He is currently a doctoral candidate in practical theology at Université Laval. His research centers on the transformation of evangelization methods in a missionary context based on understanding the present faith experience of young people.

He is now Coordinator at the Centre Emmaüs des Bois-Francs in Victoriaville, Quebec; Catechumenate Leader in Victoriaville; a chronicler for the Revue Notre-Dame-du-Cap, an announcer on Radio VM, Montreal, and a member of the Board of directors for the Conseil du patrimoine religieux du Québec (the Quebec Religious Heritage Council).
